

Otters weekly update – for the week beginning 12th July

Wow, the time is going far too quickly. We have had another week, we are nearly there Otters, keep up the good work!

Next week we are:

- Continuing to look at minibeasts, looking at worms. We will look at how worms move, what they eat, where they live and what they look like. In our writing we will be focussing on independent writing – how much can we do by ourselves!
- In numeracy, we are looking at counting in 2's and place value.
- As always we will be revisiting and playing games with our set 2 sounds.

Other things to remember:

- Even though we are nearly at the end of the term (and the year!) please do continue to read alongside your child. We understand everyone is tired, but reading is still an important part of our learning. Please record on Tapestry.
- We will change books for the last time this week. Please do check at home and return any school books you may find!
- The weather looks as if it is nicer again next week, please ensure your child has sun cream on, a school sun hat and, most importantly, a water bottle!

Owls weekly update – for the week beginning 12th July

Hello Owls!

Wow what a super end to the week we have had. What was your favourite animal from our visit this morning?

Next week in English we will be thinking about summer - we will be writing our own rules on how to stay safe in the sun. In maths we will be consolidating our knowledge of numbers and practising our mental maths through various activities and board games.

PE and Forest School will continue as normal next week. We will have lots of other fun activities each afternoon as well as having the chance to show the class our under the sea projects.

Have a super weekend!

Woodpeckers weekly update – for the week beginning 12th July

We have had a wonderful week. Our lighthouses are completed (we will be showing you next week) and we have been singing, singing and singing! Zoolab was amazing. I will upload some photographs.

Next week we will be continuing with rehearsals for our service and taking part in lots of fun, end of term activities!
