

Included in the plan are the books contained in ‘The Story project’ work for each year group. Detailed learning objectives are available in this planning for every book at the appropriate level. This overview planning includes the main objectives only. Details at the end of this scheme. We have ensured that the RSE statutory guidance content that is applicable to infant children (2020) is covered within this scheme. We are liaising with our junior feeders to make sure our offer complements theirs.

Recognising and naming emotions

Children can identify and name a wider range of feelings (for example through interpreting facial expressions) and express some of their positive qualities. They can demonstrate that they can manage some of them using strategies they have been taught.

SP - I know that happiness is important to me and to others and that I can help to make myself and others happy through small acts of kindness.

I have ways of stopping myself making poor choices that affect me and others.

SP - I know how important peace is in my life, our school and the world.

*I know how to be a peace maker. (Value linked)
I know how important it is to get enough sleep.
I know how to help myself feel just right if I am fidgety (Link to alert levels)*

I understand the importance of permission seeking.

Unicef Rights and Responsibilities Introduction:

I understand that as a child I have rights and also these are balanced with my matching responsibilities.

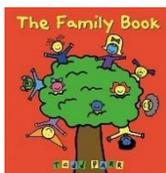

Looking after myself

They can explain ways of keeping clean (for example by washing their hands and keeping their hair tidy)

They are familiar with the 'Catch It, Bin It, Kill It' campaign and how important it is to kill germs and avoid spreading disease.

THE STORY PROJECT

The Challenge

The mental health foundation recently estimated that 2 in 3 people will experience a mental health problem in their lifetime and 50% of mental health problems first appear before the age of 14. The number of children struggling emotionally is increasing with 90% of headteachers reporting a decline in children's wellbeing over the last 5 years. Children growing up in the low socioeconomic areas are particularly vulnerable as they are 3 times more likely to suffer from a mental health problem. Poor mental health affects young people's academic results, but in recent research headteachers admitted that the importance of hitting attainment targets was so great, that there is limited capacity for wellbeing interventions.

Our Solution

The Story Project has developed a programme that integrate the development of literacy skills and wellbeing, so that primary and secondary schools can support children and young people's academic and emotional growth at the same time.

How do we do this?

The Story Project does this through three stages.

1: A curriculum for wellbeing: The Story Project provides teachers and children with a clear outline of the skills that are needed to have a good level of wellbeing. These skills cover all the government statutory requirements and have been written with input from teachers and children.

2: Stories: Each skill is matched to a fiction book or extract from a book, so the teacher has a direct example of a character who is experiencing the wellbeing issue. In primary school these are carefully chosen, popular picture books and at secondary school these are texts that are part of the GCSE or KS3 syllabus.

3: Catalogue of resources: Finally teachers are provided with resources to accompany each skill and text. The resources follow the unique STORY structure, that ensures each lesson includes a mindful Settling activity, emotional vocabulary Training, a clear Objective, a carefully chosen story/ passage to Read and then an activity and opportunity to reflect on 'how does this story relates to You?'

The whole project has been devised from researching the best international practice in this field. This research was funded by the Winston Churchill Memorial Trust and a report on the findings can be found here.

Each teacher that takes part in The Story Project attends training to ensure they understand these three stages and the benefits of teaching wellbeing skills alongside literacy skills.

By the end of primary school:

Families and people who care for me

Pupils should know

- that families are important for children growing up because they can give love, security and stability.
- the characteristics of healthy family life, commitment to each other, including in times of difficulty, protection and care for children and other family members, the importance of spending time together and sharing each other's lives.
- that others' families, either in school or in the wider world, sometimes look different from their family, but that they should respect those differences and know that other children's families are also characterised by love and care.
- that stable, caring relationships, which may be of different types, are at the heart of happy families, and are important for children's security as they grow up.
- that marriage represents a formal and legally recognised commitment of two people to each other which is intended to be lifelong.
- how to recognise if family relationships are making them feel unhappy or unsafe, and how to seek help or advice from others if needed.

Caring friendships

Pupils should know

- how important friendships are in making us feel happy and secure, and how people choose and make friends.
- the characteristics of friendships, including mutual respect, truthfulness, trustworthiness, loyalty, kindness, generosity, trust, sharing interests and experiences and support with problems and difficulties.
- that healthy friendships are positive and welcoming towards others, and do not make others feel lonely or excluded.
- that most friendships have ups and downs, and that these can often be worked through so that the friendship is repaired or even strengthened, and that resorting to violence is never right.
- how to recognise who to trust and who not to trust, how to judge when a friendship is making them feel unhappy or uncomfortable, managing conflict, how to manage these situations and how to seek help or advice from others, if needed.

Respectful relationships

Pupils should know

- the importance of respecting others, even when they are very different from them (for example, physically, in character, personality or backgrounds), or make different choices or have different preferences or beliefs.
- practical steps they can take in a range of different contexts to improve or support respectful relationships.
- the conventions of courtesy and manners.
- the importance of self-respect and how this links to their own happiness.
- that in school and in wider society they can expect to be treated with respect by others, and that in turn they should show due respect to others, including those in positions of authority. Marriage in England and Wales is available to both opposite sex and same sex couples. The Marriage (Same Sex Couples) Act 2013 extended marriage to same sex couples in England and Wales. The ceremony through which a couple get married may be civil or religious.
- about different types of bullying (including cyberbullying), the impact of bullying, responsibilities of bystanders (primarily reporting bullying to an adult) and how to get help.
- what a stereotype is, and how stereotypes can be unfair, negative or destructive.
- the importance of permission-seeking and giving in relationships with friends, peers and adults.

Online relationships

Pupils should know

- that people sometimes behave differently online, including by pretending to be someone they are not.
- that the same principles apply to online relationships as to face-to-face relationships, including the importance of respect for others online including when we are anonymous.
- the rules and principles for keeping safe online, how to recognise risks, harmful content and contact, and how to report them.
- how to critically consider their online friendships and sources of information including awareness of the risks associated with people they have never met.
- how information and data is shared and used online.

Being safe

Pupils should know

- what sorts of boundaries are appropriate in friendships with peers and others (including in a digital context).
- about the concept of privacy and the implications of it for both children and adults; including that it is not always right to keep secrets if they relate to being safe.
- that each person's body belongs to them, and the differences between appropriate and inappropriate or unsafe physical, and other, contact.
- how to respond safely and appropriately to adults they may encounter (in all contexts, including online) whom they do not know.
- how to recognise and report feelings of being unsafe or feeling bad about any adult.

- how to ask for advice or help for themselves or others, and to keep trying until they are heard.
- how to report concerns or abuse, and the vocabulary and confidence needed to do so.
- where to get advice e.g. family, school and/or other sources
